The Rosa-Luxemburg-Stiftung is one of the largest political education institutions in Germany today, with branches in many countries worldwide. The Brussels Office operates as a think tank reflecting on European and international issues such as the global power shift and the socio-ecological transformation of today's society. Madrid office as liaison office is organizational affiliated to Brussels office.

RLS Madrid office has developed several projects related to housing <https://rosalux.es/lineas-de-trabajo/vivienda/>

Housing is one of the main concerns of the Spanish population. The increase in the price of renting and buying has made access to housing difficult not only for young people or those in more precarious sectors but also for a significant portion of the population. The proliferation of tourist flats, the lack of regulation for temporary rentals, and speculation with housing as a market commodity have undermined housing as a fundamental right.

Disseminating information, promoting debates, and fostering political education on housing and the right to the city are among the primary tasks of the RLS Madrid office. Therefore, we are seeking a partner to develop an in-depth study on this topic.

Our objective is to create educational material that aids in understanding the current situation while also proposing alternatives to the prevailing housing model in Spain. Housing is a fundamental right under threat, not only in Spain but also worldwide.

We are inviting proposals for the development of an in-depth study on housing for an RLS online publication. Specifically:

- Development of quantitative analysis
- Statistic design
- Development of qualitative analysis
- Report writing

Your application should include:

- CV and portfolio. Research experience must be proven
- A project outline, consisting of:
 - A concept note (max. 2,000 characters including spaces)
 - A project timeline (please name your proposed start)
- Description of political, social and/or cultural engagement
- Proven established expertise and research in the field and validated data collection methods, if possible already existing data.

RLS Madrid office and contractor will sign a co-edition agreement under RLS guidelines, starting on 2025. Please contact Amelia Martínez Lobo for further and detailed information.

We hereby request you to submit your binding offer for the provision of the above services in English to amelia.martinez-lobo@rosalux.org by 31.12.2024 by the end of the day.

If you need further information, please also contact with the indicated email address.

All offers received are weighted according to the following criteria:

Price	70%
Portfolio	30%

Best Regards.
